

Welcome to White Roding

Introduction

Welcome to White Roding.

We hope this book will help you find your feet in our village.

A copy can also be found on the Parish Council website
<http://www.essexinfo.net/whiterodingparishcouncil>

This book has been produced and funded by White Roding Parish Council.

History

Originally the village name was Blanche ROUNG but at a later date became White Roding. According to the 1841 census return, the village of White Roding, had 94 inhabited houses and 4 uninhabited units, with a population of 488. The 1901 census showed that the number of households had reduced to 84 with a lesser population of 375. Today the number of properties shown on the electoral roll is higher at 136 but the population is only in the order of 255 adults plus children.

During the 400 year Roman occupation of Britain many roads were constructed and three of these intersected near Great Dunmow; one travelled north east from Romford, one approximately north from Chelmsford and one travelling east-west from Colchester to Dunstable. As a consequence Roman coins and artefacts have been found in the fields surrounding the village. The coins are mainly bronze denarii and were minted during the period 211 BC to 270 AD under the orders of the relevant Roman emperors.

The Parish Church of St Martin is of Norman origin with later additions. St Martin's Church was constructed circa 1100 AD of flint rubble, some stone and Roman brick. It has a large embattled tower, originally surmounted by a spire, which contained five bells, all of which are still in situ although they cannot be used. The white part of the village name has always been attributed to the light colour of the rubble of which St Martin's church tower was built.

Summarised, the church details are as follows: walls have Roman bricks at corners of nave, 11th century arches and tiny windows, 12th century carved font and consecration crosses on altar stone, 13th century iron work on South door, 14th century two carved figures in sanctuary, 15th century roof and stained roundel glass, 16th century tower with battlements, 17th century porch and new bells, 18th century chest and altar table, 19th century vestry when church was restored; 20th century memorials to Queen Victoria and King Edward VII; 21st century servery and toilet at the base of the tower.

It is recorded that William the Conqueror held land as part of his royal demise, but no further monarch appears in records as Lord of the Manor until the reign of King Henry III. The first time White Roding is separately named is in the Westminster Domesday of 1120.

One of the most interesting features of White Roding is the number of houses, themselves old or built on the site of older dwellings with moats. There are ten within this village. Although they cannot be dated, moats were generally made between the 13th and 15th centuries at a time when those who had any property to safeguard adopted this means of protection. The houses that were so protected were The Rectory, Colville Hall, Marks Hall, Mascallsbury, Gatehouse, Elms, Snows, Lucas Farm, Cammas Hall and Pottings.

The village has many fine listed buildings including Mascallsbury, Marks Hall, Cammas Hall and the most attractive inner court-yarded Colville Hall.

To the eastern edge of the village lies Warwicks. Built circa 1500 as a Hall House (or Hunting Lodge), the whole building is constructed of heavy timber framing, lathe and plaster with some pargetting. There are also two thatched barns in the grounds, one built around 1700 with the second built in the early 1800's. It seems the original occupiers of Warwicks may have had to hold ready for the use of the King, a hawk for hunting.

The Old Mill was the last tower mill to be built in Essex and ceased to be used in the 1930's. One eminent owner of this mill was the actor Sir Michael Redgrave during the early 1940's.

In 1943 construction of an airfield commenced, known as USAAF Matching, mainly sited in Abbess Roding but also partly in White Roding. This airfield became the base for the B-26 Martin Marauders, under the control of the 9th Air Force, 391st Bomb Group, moving in on the 25th January 1944. During their stay until 1st October 1944 they flew 6,000 sorties, with the loss of 197 men killed, wounded or missing in action. On D-Day the group flew two missions against enemy gun positions and two German fighter aircraft were shot down.

It has now been returned to agricultural and commercial use, but much remains to be seen today: the control tower is used for radar testing, the tall water tower still stands amongst various Nissen and Romney huts. Not far away, and near to the former ambulance station, is the memorial to the 391st Bomb Group (Medium).

Schooling came to White Roding with the construction of a school house in 1812, the money for the building raised by public subscription. Known as School House, the centre portion was the teacher's cottage and either side were schoolrooms, one for boys and one for girls. The school remained in use until 1875, although a Sunday school was still being run as late as 1907. This building is now known as Church Cottage. A new school was constructed, again in Church Lane, but on the opposite side of the road and further north. Closed in the 1960's, when all pupils were transferred to Leaden Roding, this property is now known as School House, which is most appropriate.

White Roding today

White Roding is a straggling village pleasantly situated on the western side of the vale of the River Roding and comprises an area of some 1,853 acres. The parish straddles the A1060 within easy travelling proximity to Bishop's Stortford, Chelmsford, Harlow and Great Dunmow.

Stansted Airport is sited some 6.3 miles from White Roding.

The parish has a landscape that is dominated by picturesque farmland and open countryside managed by the parish's farmers.

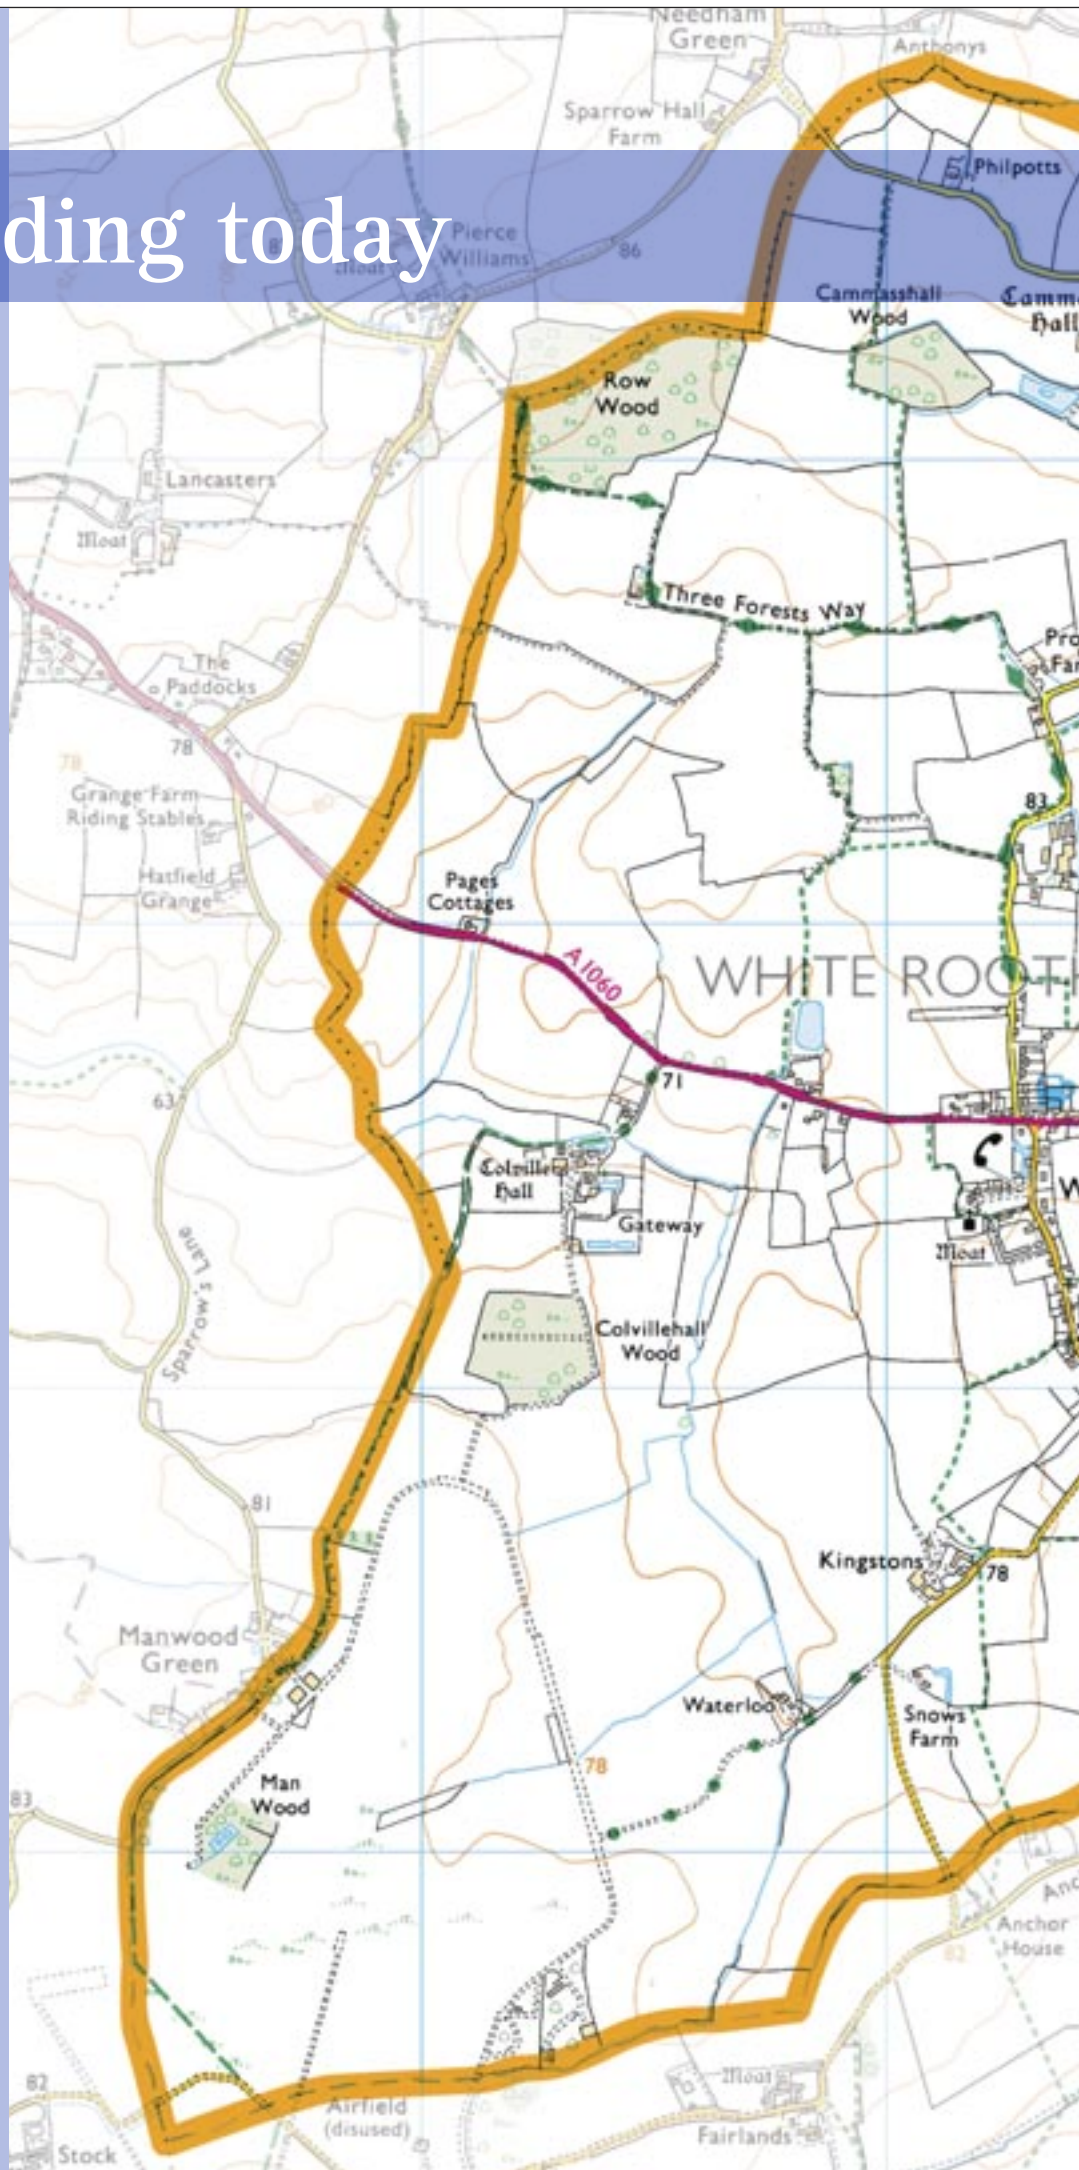

The village lies on a road route that links larger towns with the M11 and other large areas of commerce.

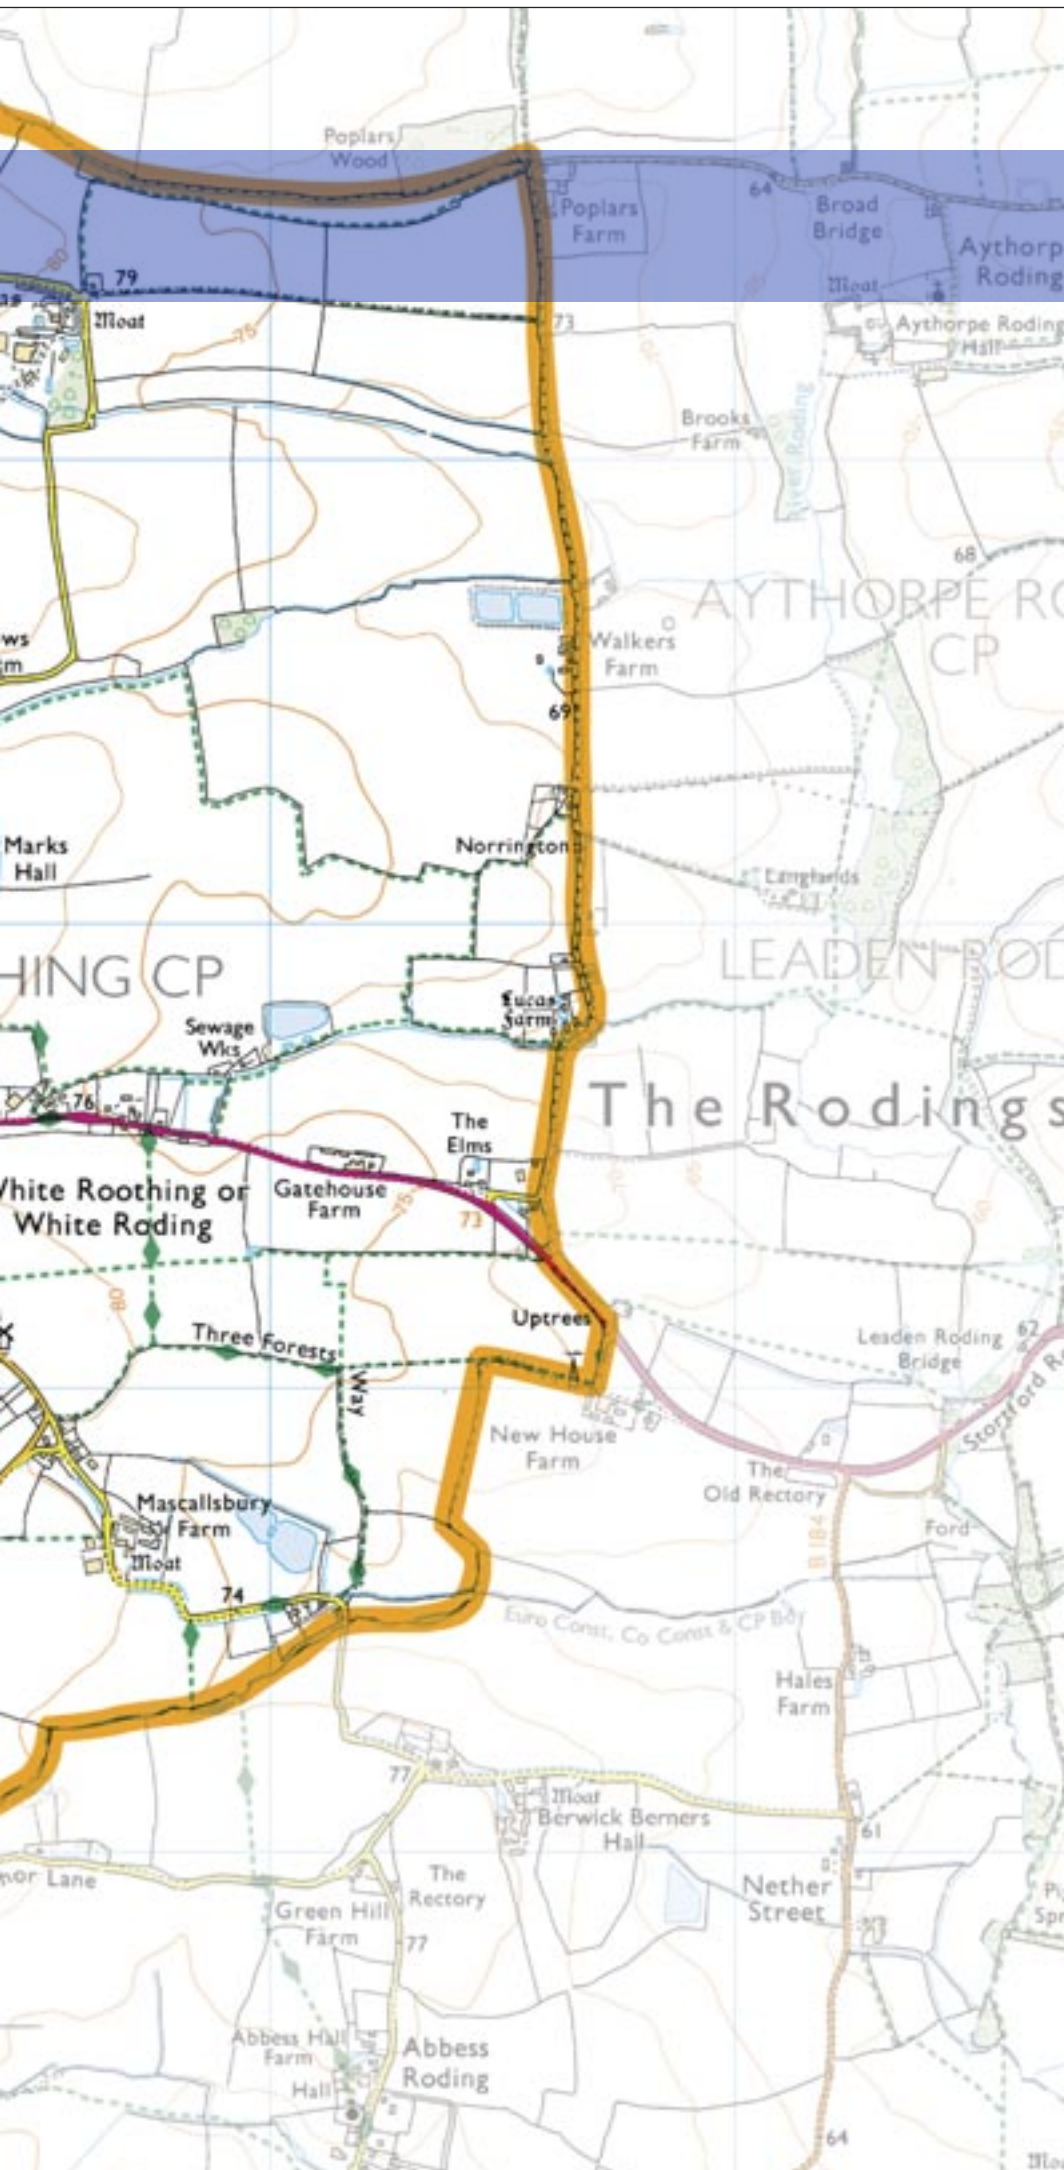

Today the Parish of White Roding extends to 140 households, covering the area of Church Lane/Matching Lane, Walkers Lane, Marks Hall Lane and the A1060.

The population is in excess of 230 persons.

The properties in the parish are made up of mainly detached houses (55%) with semi-detached at 24% the next largest group. Of these properties 87% are owner occupied, with a further 10% rented.

The vast majority of residents have lived in the village and surrounds for more than 6 years. 25% have lived here for 6-15 years, 20% for 16-25 years, and a further 22% for over 26 years. Interestingly 13% of residents have lived here for the whole of their lives.

Of those residents that have moved here the most common reason for doing so was “love of country life” (29%). The second most common reason for living in White Roding is being born here.*

The village a thriving social and sports club, a farm shop complex, and vehicle repair garages along with other light industry.

The club runs regular crib and whist drives, and other special events such as Quiz nights and themed social evenings. There is also a Horticultural Society, a Friendship Club for the over sixties, two reading groups and Cameo for local women as well as a social group for local men (GWR). All of these are described in more detail in this book.

The Parish News, a monthly magazine servicing ten local villages, has a section devoted to White Roding news. It includes information about church services, Parish Council meetings, reports on local clubs and societies and advertises local businesses, services and activities. It is currently delivered to about 90 households in White Roding.

During August we hold our Annual Show that culminates in an evening buffet, presentation of awards and auction of produce. In July we visit a well known garden or similar by coach and in September we hold a garden party in one of our member's properties

We are affiliated members of the Royal Horticultural Society and enjoy the benefits derived from same, i.e. Chelsea Flower Show. Outings are arranged to famous gardens such as Wisley, Cambridge University Botanical Gardens, etc.

Information

White Roding Parish Council

The Parish of White Roding is part of Uttlesford District Council and the Parish Council functions with five elected councillors and a Parish Clerk. The Parish Council meets bi-monthly on the third Monday of January, March, May, July, September and November in the Sports and Social Club. An open public forum precedes each meeting from 19.30 – 19.45 which is followed by the formal council meeting. All residents are welcome to attend the council meetings but may only participate with the consent of the Chairman.

The council's main task is to work within the structure of Local Government Acts and its designated duties are really quite small: appointing the chair, councillors, clerk, finance officer, auditors; consulting with all White Roding parishioners to ensure understanding of local needs while managing any arising conflicts of interests in the different groups – the young and elderly, mothers with young children, walkers, drivers, farmers; and armed with local knowledge make informed and sound decisions about issues that have impact on the local environment.

White Roding Village Hall

Following the 1914/18 War the village was fortunate to have two farmers, namely a Mr Broad and a Mr Haigh serving as Parish Councillors. These two gentlemen decided to donate land in Dunmow Road, White Roding. This was for the purpose of providing a Memorial to those who lost their lives in the War. It was agreed the land was to be used as a sports field and for a village hall.

A hall was constructed and the village people enjoyed both the playing field and the village hall for many years. Unfortunately, it seems the building fell into disrepair and towards the end of the second World War it was decided to pull the village hall down and to apply for planning consent to erect two dwellings, now known as Mill Cottages, in Church Lane. The sale proceeds enabled the present five acre site to be purchased by the Charity. A planning application for the erection of a new village hall was made to Dunmow Rural District Council, and upon planning consent being obtained, a Grant was received from Essex County Council.

Two men in particular, Mr John Lukies (as President) and Mr Percy Lester (as Chairman) worked tirelessly, setting up the new hall and playing field, and will be long remembered by the village community.

Under the rules of the Charity every resident of the Parish of age 18 years or more is entitled to attend the Annual General Meeting and to vote on all matters, including the election of Trustees. Each organisation which uses the hall or land is entitled to nominate a Trustee to represent that association membership alongside of Parish Councillors who serve as Trustees. For the purpose of good management and hall booking, the Social and Sports Club is annually appointed by the Trustees as Manager for the Village Hall Charity. The Parish Clerk for the time being acts as Secretary to the Trustees.
